HIGHLAND HOSPITAL COMMUNITY MURAL PROJECT

The Alameda County Arts Commission is working with local families to create a mural for the Highland Hospital construction fence. The Arts Commission established this new project as part of its on-going program 100 Families Alameda County: Art and Social Change. The project's goal is to bring together multigenerational families from the Highland community and families with children who attend local schools to enliven, celebrate, and strengthen the power and health of families and community through the inspiring and transformative process of making art. This program contributes to Alameda County's vision to be one of the best counties in which to live, work, and do business with, while fostering safe neighborhoods and thriving communities. The families worked with teaching artists Joaquin Newman and Eduardo Pineda throughout five workshops at Highland Hospital. The families' artwork will be featured in a mural created by the artists that will be unveiled in March 2011.

The participating families were recruited through a process that included hand-delivering 300 flyers throughout the neighborhood, email invitations to neighborhood groups, and outreach to families with children at Bella

Vista Elementary School and community organizations.

The 100 Families program is presented in partnership with the New Beginnings Program, a public-private partnership benefiting the youth of Alameda County. Funding for this mural project is provided through the County's "Percent for Public Art" ordinance, Clark Construction, and Vanir Construction Management. The project was approved by the Members of the Arts Commission and Public Art Advisory Committee.

Along with a community mural being featured on the construction fence, the $2 million ATR project art program will also be featuring art inside the new buildings. The Alameda County Arts Commission believe the arts are essential for a vibrant, creative, livable, and economically healthy community. For more information about your community art programs and how you can be involved, please visit The Alameda County Art Commission Website at www.acgov.org/arts.
